ECMC, Buffalo, NY/TEK Systems

Position: HIM Coder

- 1.) RHIT (preferred), CPC, CCS or RHIA coding certificate
- 2.) 6+ months experience Emergency Department chart coding. Must have understanding of modifiers. Experience in other outpatient environment may also be applicable.
- 3.) Experience with 3M, Linx and/or Meditech is nice to have, but not required

Job Description:

ECMC recently incurred a security breach which has cause significant down time for their HIM charts. They have over 8000 visits that need to be coded to catch up on this backlog. They are entirely manually so all coders need to be onsite. Day to day they will be responsible for coding backlogged ER charts back into Meditech. The production expectation for this environment is 40 charts a day. They use a relational database called Linx to code with 3M in their EHR Meditech software. The goal is for the backlog to be caught up by June 26th and after that the team would support some of the permanent team's vacations to ensure they don't fall behind. This team would be focused on less complicated accounts that are live and current while the permanent team is focused more on complicated paper charts.

The use Linx for their charging system which is a point and click charging system so understanding modifiers in the ED environment is important. Linx charges don't cross over until 8 in the evening to 3M. NYS coders are great because they understand spark credits. They see a varied population being a trauma center so it sometimes takes some searching to capture the true diagnosis. They also have a psychiatric program which has additional unique modifiers
